Last year the Greek ruthorities, to the surprise and indignation of the Evangelical, Greeks, closed the Protestant schools in folas. The Government imposed conditions on the schools which the Protestants could not accept—viz., the teaching of the orthodox full by a priest and the hauging of the picture of the Virgin on the walland the school-room. The Evangelicals, who school-room. The Evangelicals, who have long earnestly contended for full religious liberty, instead of mere toleration, vigorously assailed the position of the Government in the Volus matter? For this they have been accussed of giving information against and calum-niating their country. To this charge they have recently replied. The minister of England in Constantinople, to whom the head (ethnarch) of the Protestants referred the matter, asked by testants referred the matter, asked Dr. Kalopothakes how much religious lib-erty the Evangelical Greeks enjoyed in Greece. In answer, he was informed that the Evangelical Greeks had no occasion to complain of persecution or oppression on the part of the Greek government. It had never interfered with them in their services; but this was due to toleration, rather than to acknowledged right. Where, however, tolera tion exists, there was inequality of rights; consequently, lack of religious

To no native or foreigner of a different religious belief is it permitted to establish a school in Greece for general patronage, if the Greek Catechism is not taught in it by an orthodox priest and the picture of Christ or the Virgin hung in it. As to toleration in matters of worship the Evangelical Greeks prove that there is nothing more by quoting from the constitution of Greece, which in its first article has the following:
